Q: One User Post to Multiple Accounts I am sure this has already been answered. But I couldn't find a solution... I have two webapps and two users. The first user from webapp A posts (as Ajax) to the second user in webapp B. This works perfect. But I want another user from webapp B to post the same data, as well. This is my POST request from webapp B: `$.ajax({ type: "POST", url: "" + id, data: $(this).serialize(), success: function(res){ //Get res }, dataType: "json", error: function(res) { //Put error messege } });` I don't know how to replace 'id' in the url with the id of the second user from webapp B. I tried finding the ID using this: `$("#td:contains("" + id + "")").text();` But it only gives me the ID of the first user. How do I get the ID of the second user? (I tried searching through the code of my first app, but I didn't find anything).

A: You can get the id from the `$_GET` variable with: `$id = $_GET['id'];` If this is the case, you will have to make a check within the success function in your Ajax call to filter the data against the id that is provided.
