Dacomitinib - A Review in Non Small Cell Lung Cancer (NSCLC). Dacomitinib is an orally administered selective allosteric inhibitor of the epidermal growth factor receptor (EGFR) tyrosine kinase which may cause nonresponsiveness or resistance to EGFR-tyrosine kinase inhibitors (TKIs) in patients with advanced NSCLC. Although this agent is not indicated to treat patients with EGFR exon 19 deletions or exon 21 (L858R) mutations, dacomitinib has been granted accelerated approval by the US FDA based on response rates of $\geq 15\%$ in patients with NSCLC with these genotypes. Dacomitinib has also been granted marketing approval in the EU for the treatment of non-squamous NSCLC in patients with disease progression on or after first-line platinum-based doublet chemotherapy, and first-line treatment of patients with squamous NSCLC and disease progression on or after platinum-based doublet chemotherapy or first-line treatment of patients with locally advanced unresectable or metastatic squamous NSCLC. In this review, the pharmacology of dacomitinib and available clinical evidence from Phase 2 and 3 studies evaluating its safety and efficacy are discussed. As a monotherapy, dacomitinib has a broad spectrum of antitumour activity against tumours with wild-type and mutant EGFR, including the T790M mutation associated with acquired resistance to EGFR TKIs, as
