Modern Windows operating systems support the pressing of key combinations, causing various programs and functions to activate by themselves. One of the essential keys to activate the Windows Start menu and Windows Shut Down are the "Windows" and "Esc" keys, which activates the "esc" key using its function, making the pressing of "Esc" the only way to access the Start menu or Shutdown when pressing the "Esc" key. However, when the "Esc" key is pressed, "Windows" and "Esc" are activated as well, but when the user continues pressing the "Esc" key, the "Esc" key is press again, causing a third program to be activated. It is not easy to determine, on which Windows system you are running. Therefore, using the "keycode" and "keycord" variables, "scancode" and "HIPscancode" variables determine the current Windows system. And also the "Control" key is used to determine if it is Alt, Ctrl, or Esc. When the "keycode" variable is in the "Windows" system", the "keycode" variable is used to determine the state of the Alt, Ctrl, and Esc keys. And when the "keycode" variable is in the "Console" system", the "keycode" variable is used to determine the state of the Alt and Ctrl keys; but when the "keycode" variable is in the "Console" system", the "keycode" variable is used to determine the state of the Esc key. When the "keycord" variable is in the "Windows" system", the "keycord" variable is used to determine the
