Other games are purely cooperative, but this game forces you to use all your strategic resources to defeat the opponent. However, the problem with this game is that it can become a bit repetitive. If you lose a few times in a row, it can lose its luster. The elements of the game are: Maps - There are four different maps, with three for each player. The maps have varying levels of difficulty. They are: Crevasse, Vertigo, Cloud, and Metropolis. The edges of the map have varying degrees of sharpness. Game Rules - The game has three major game rules:1. Victory Points - You start with 40 victory points. As you use your economy resources, your money and army size, you earn victory points. When your opponent runs out of victory points, he/she is the loser.2. Economy Resources - You start with 10 units of each resource. Each time you make a purchase (ex. barracks, factory, etc.), you can use your resources to purchase one or more units. You may not use all your resources to purchase one unit.3. Economy Upgrades - You start with two upgrade slots. You can spend one of your resources to buy a unit of a specific upgrade slot. The cost of the unit increases with each upgrade slot. The universe of StarCraft is quite large. The missions and maps cover a wide variety of situations. The reason I chose this game is because it is one of the most popular games of all time. Also, the price of this game is very reasonable. I still think this is one of the best real time strategy games available. I hope you try it.
