If you're looking for a graphics editor for web developers and designers, we suggest you try Pixlr. Adobe Photoshop Adobe Photoshop is a professional illustration software application that allows you to design and create images of any type. Admittedly, it can get expensive, but Photoshop is one of the most well known graphics applications on the planet. Use this for web designers and developers. Use it for video editors, graphic designers, photographers, illustrators, and photographers. It can be used to make posters, videos, print advertisements, flyers, logos, websites, and anything else a skilled designer would create in Photoshop. It is also used for image creation, page layout, photo manipulation, and retouching. Adobe Photoshop is divided into two parts: the main Photoshop file and its libraries. The main Photoshop file is usually where you'll do most of your work, and you'll open libraries so you can access the different types of documents and tools you need. The other main part is the Photoshop Libraries. The Adobe Photoshop Libraries are basically, where the tools are located and where the document will store its graphics. For web designers and developers, the library is an important part of Photoshop. Adobe Photoshop core features Adobe Photoshop can import, edit, save, and export images in a wide variety of formats. It comes with a slew of different utilities that will help you perform these actions. WYSIWYG Every tool in Photoshop allows you to create images using the "what you see is what you get" tool. This is where you can see the exact result you're going to get when creating your image. By using the WYSIWYG tool, you won't have to worry about little details getting missed. Designers If you're a web designer, you'll find Photoshop very useful, especially because it contains a myriad of tools for creating those web designs, not just illustrations. It can be used to create logos, web pages, and any other design. Photographers Using Photoshop can allow you to take a photo to use as a print advertisement or even an Instagram post. It can also be used to create logos, posters, and more. Photographers will also find the Actions and Photostets to be useful tools. Video Editors Using Photoshop allows you to make edits to your videos. Unlike other programs, Adobe Photoshop can be used to edit videos.

Q: Angular 4 : Passing Template in Window and subscribing to data in the parent I have a scenario where a child component wants to display a window (in a method), but it needs to receive a template as well. As of now, I am able to achieve this by sending a template as a string. However, I am unable to achieve the same in the parent component where I am trying to subscribe to the data from the child component. I get the data, but when I try to subscribe to the data, it doesn't. I am including the code to illustrate it in detail The Base Component The Child component // Parent Component /// @Output() childMethod = new EventEmitter(); @Input() data: Data; @Input() template: string; @HostListener('window:resize', ['Sevent']) onResize(size) { console.log(size); this.childMethod.emit(size); } Why are these not working together? Is there a better way to achieve this? A: This is how you can send child component's parameter to a parent component: // Parent component --> @Input() data: Data; @Input() template: string; This way your parent component can access your child component's input parameter. The child component can get the template using event to pass it to the parent component. There are some issues in your code: You are emitting a string, not an object. Change it to event or an Object to receive the parameter. The view from the child is loading when the parent is trying to get the template. Move the view initialization into the ngAfterViewInit lifecycle hook of the child component. Curiel Cur
