if this code get's executed twice

How to find out if this code gets executed twice (some sort of loop is executed twice) for a given argument in the following code?

extern "C" { #include } struct foo { int a; }; void bar(int foo_stuff) { printf(" %d", foo_stuff.a); } int main(int argc, char argv) { struct foo f; f.a = argc; bar(f); return 0; }

A: That's actually undefined behavior, you are not allowed to modify a struct member from outside the object the way you are doing. You can use memcpy(&f, &foo, sizeof(f)), that should do the trick for you. The reason it is undefined behavior is because the struct foo's field will be interpreted as char * or unsigned char *, which might be part of a bigger structure. Your example will probably not execute twice if the argument is interpreted as a pointer, if it's a pointer to a struct with a field of type int, it can be interpreted as a pointer to an array of that int type, though. Radiation therapy as a potent treatment for cancer has existed for the last several decades. In the years since its inception, the technology has evolved, and continues to evolve, to achieve greater levels of accuracy and safety. However, while advances in treatment technology have been made, radiation therapy for many types of cancer remains substantially similar to the technology which existed in the 1970's. 04aeff104c
